Self-reference and the divorce between meaning and truth. (English summary)

Log. Log. Philos. 22 (2013), no. 4, 445–452.

In this brief paper the author “argues that a certain type of self-referential sentence falsifies the widespread assumption that a declarative sentence’s meaning is identical to its truth condition”. The author “argues that this problem cannot be assimilated to certain other problems ... on the basis of inter-linguistic and intra-linguistic evidence concerning the behavior of a particular kind of self-referential sentence”.

The paper has the following sections: (1) Introduction; (2) What the problem is; (3) What the problem isn’t; (4) Conclusion.
